

Assistant Professor, Leisure and Events
University of Waterloo

The Department of Recreation and Leisure Studies (RLS) in the Faculty of Health at the University of Waterloo invites applications from exceptional leisure and event studies scholars for one tenure track position at the rank of Assistant Professor. The anticipated start date is July 1, 2024, or as soon as practicable thereafter. The research of the successful candidate will have an event studies and/or event management focus and should be informed by critical perspectives and rooted in a concern for people and places impacted by events. Research interests may include, but are not limited to: events and their relationship with community, health and well-being, sport, tourism, climate justice, sustainability, sustainable development goals, recreation, Indigenization and decolonization, inclusion, placemaking, social justice, youth, and/or diaspora. Applicants should be familiar with the critical study of events and seek to address their wider social, cultural, environmental, and/or political contexts or impacts through their research and teaching. They may bring an emancipatory and/or liberatory orientation to their research program and teaching. Practice and active engagement with anti-racist and/or anti-colonial research methodologies is welcome. The preferred candidate must see themselves as a scholar who can contribute to the field of leisure studies, broadly defined.

The preferred applicant must have a completed Doctorate in Recreation and Leisure Studies or a related field by the time of the appointment. Evidence of an actively developing research program is required. The applicant is expected to propose a program of high-quality research that will attract external funding, recruit excellent graduate students, and mobilize knowledge to a range of audiences and community partners. Preference will be given to applicants whose research aligns with the Department, Faculty, and University strategic plans and the Department's vision of "advancing well-being through leisure to create a just and healthy world."

Duties include research, teaching at the undergraduate and graduate levels, supervision and mentorship of graduate students, and service duties. The successful candidate will be required to develop and teach an array of traditional, online, and/or blended courses that support the Recreation and Leisure Studies curriculum, including the event management minor. Applicants' pedagogical approaches must be able to foster and enhance the integration of critical thinking skills, work-integrated learning approaches, experiential learning, problem-solving skills, and various forms of dialogue and communication into the classroom. Non-traditional and creative approaches to pedagogy are welcome.

The preferred candidate will join an active, vibrant, and growing program. We currently have 18 faculty and offer Doctorate, research-focused Masters/Magisteriate, and course-based Masters/Magisteriate degrees in Recreation and Leisure Studies; Baccalaureate degrees in Recreation and Leisure Studies, Therapeutic Recreation, and Recreation and Sport Business, Minors in Tourism and Event Management; and a collaborative Doctorate degree in Aging, Health and Well-Being. Applicants should visit the Department of Recreation and Leisure Studies for more details on our programs and faculty.

Applications received by March 1, 2024, will be given full consideration. However, applications will continue to be reviewed until the position is filled. The annual starting salary range for this position at the rank of Assistant Professor is $85,307 to $107,368. Actual starting salary will be commensurate with experience, qualifications, competence, and research record.

Three letters of reference will be requested for applicants invited for an interview. Applicants should send their curriculum vitae, cover letter, research statement, evidence of teaching excellence, and contact information for three academic referees by email attachment to Dr. Troy Glover, Chair, Department of Recreation and Leisure Studies, University of Waterloo with a copy to Anton Trinh, Administrative Officer.

The University of Waterloo acknowledges that much of our work takes place on the traditional territory of the Neutral, Anishinaabeg and Haudenosaunee peoples. Our main campus is situated on the Haldimand Tract, the land granted to the Six Nations that includes six miles on each side of the Grand River. Our active work toward reconciliation takes place across our campuses through research, learning, teaching, and community building, and is centralized within our Indigenous Initiatives Office.

The University values the diverse and intersectional identities of its students, faculty, and staff. The University regards equity and diversity as an integral part of academic excellence and is committed to accessibility for all employees. The University of Waterloo seeks applicants who embrace our values of equity, anti-racism, and inclusion. As such, we encourage applications from candidates who have been historically disadvantaged and marginalized, including applicants who identify as First Nations, Métis, and/or Inuit/Inuk, Black, racialized, people with disabilities, women and/or 2SLGBTQ+.

The University of Waterloo is committed to accessibility for persons with disabilities. Applicants requiring any application, interview, or workplace accommodation should contact Occupational Health which will work with the selection committee to secure accommodation while ensuring that the information is safe-guarded, and confidentiality is maintained.

If you have any questions regarding the position, the application process, assessment process, or eligibility, please contact Dr. Troy Glover, Chair, Department of Recreation and Leisure Studies, 519-888-4567 ext. 43097.

All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, Canadians and permanent residents will be given priority.

Three reasons to apply